My Wother's Grave.

BY T HAMILTON VANANDA.

April is weeping tears Upon the dead face of the frozen earth, Which, like a stricken onteast from its birth, Goes wandering through the spherea!

And o'er the new-made tomb, Mother, we too, are shedding lears of grief-Tears that must ever fall to bring relief, In sprow's settling gloom!

Watchers were round thy bed Listening in silence for thy faintest breath, But it was over—and the Sential, Death, Stands watcher at thy head!

Deep in the nru of Memory there lives The influence that a mother's counsel gives To life-that life to thrill.

Even as the tiny shells Arc ever murmuring by the sca shore dim, A soft refrain to oceau's mournful hymn, In faint, enraptming swells:

So memory ever sings
By the heart's aea, its oft-repeated moans,
And breathes no cadence in its angulsh tones,
But in the dim past rings. "Noboxy! Do you ses-spose I can't see! Do you think I'm drunk? There,

F arewell!—a last farcwell!
And as wedrift, unguided, in Life's sea,
Let but each breeze whisper a word from thee;
Some word—but not—farewell!

KENTUCKY CORN & COB MILL

It is well known that there is great economy in crushing or grinding the kernels of all grain before feeding it to stock, and that there is much nutriment in the cob when properly broken or ground. And the only reason that mills arranged to produce these desired results have not been more generally introduced among planters and farmers, has been their complex arrangement

In the Kentucky Corn and Cob Mill, of which the above is an accurate engraving, we claim to have produced a machine at ouce efficient, substantial and cheap, while Its arrangement is so stantial and cheap, while its arrangement is so simple that the most ordinary hand can adjust and operate t. This machine, unlike any other, is regulated by means 3 of a single act screw, which is easly moved by hand, and is applied directly under the center of the mill.

Any one using these mills will find a clear saving of ONE QUARTER of their corn over the old plan of fertinary.
